FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

Leading Renewable Energy Attorney Joshua Nathan Joins Cleantech Law Partners

Legal expert and industry veteran specializing in renewable energy and corporate transactions joins CLP's legal team as senior counsel

San Francisco (June 1, 2017) Cleantech Law Partners (www.cleantechlaw.com) announces today that leading energy attorney Joshua Nathan has joined the firm.

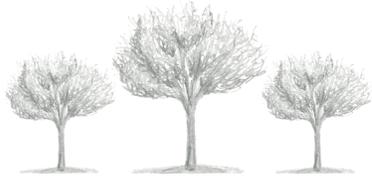

Cleantech Law Partners, a full-service law firm dedicated exclusively to the legal and policy needs of the renewable energy industry, is proud to be able to bring on yet another top-notch attorney who specializes in issues affecting the clean technology and renewable energy industries.

“Josh’s background spans a broad spectrum of legal areas, with extensive experience working in the renewable energy sector,” said Jack Jacobs, CLP’s Managing Partner. “His expertise is a great match for CLP and will help us as continue to serve our clients’ growing legal needs.”

Josh has been representing manufacturers, EPC contractors, service providers and developers in the construction, technology and clean energy sectors for more than 25 years, and has consulted wind, solar, biomass and real estate companies in a wide range of projects.

Since 2000, Mr. Nathan has held the position of General Counsel for Vestas American Wind Technology, Acciona Energy North America and Third Planet Windpower, LLC – leading teams that developed and built more than 4000 megawatts of clean energy projects.

Josh provides invaluable counsel to developers and manufacturers on wind, biomass, and solar projects around the U.S. and negotiated international cooperation agreements worldwide. His recent work as a legal consultant has led to the successful completion of more than 950 megawatts of clean energy generation across North and South America. Josh’s technical background combined with his business, legal and leadership
